Sleep treat staying on shelves for now

Brownie snack offers 'relaxed' experience Some store owners don't see problem with 'Lazy Larry'

Convenience store owner Tomas Rodriquez isn't taking Lazy Larry relaxation brownies off his shelves until the Food and Drug Administration makes him.

"We are allowed to sell it ... as long as they are legal I will keep them," said Rodriquez, owner of Montrose Spa in Cambridge.

The FDA announced Monday that the makers of the brownies, a treat marketed as a chilled-out mood enhancer, violates the agency's regulations by using melatonin as an unapproved food additive.

Lazy Larry laces its cakes with the drug, promising to help consumers "wind down" and relax.

In a letter sent to the Tennessee-based maker, the FDA said they can seize the product from stores if the recipe doesn't change.

The company, HBB LLC, has 15 days to respond to the letter.

But Rodriquez said he sells as many as 36 individually wrapped cakes to college students each week at his store near Harvard Law School and the chocolate-y treats would stay on his shelves until the FDA issues definite restrictions.

Comparing them to alcohol and 5-Hour Energy Drinks, he said if it's not against the law he doesn't see a problem.

What's in a Larry?

Lazy Larrys contain melatonin, a naturally occurring neurohormone that regulates the sleep-wake cycle, according to an FDA spokesperson.

WHAT DO YOU THINK? POST YOUR COMMENTS: WWW.METRO.US/BOS

"It's like everything else, they have a warning on the label," said Rodriquez.

Other Hub shops already banned the brownies for fear of a lawsuit, however.

Tony Massari, owner of Boston Common Coffee, said he heard tales of people giving the sleep-inducing munchies to kids, causing them to get sick.

"I didn't want to open myself up to issues down the road," he said.

Owner of Lazy Larry, Terry Harris, said in an e-mail that the company is taking immediate steps to address concerns expressed by the FDA, "all of which stem from the way the product is packaged, labeled and marketed."

However, the FDA said the food additive is the major issue.

Police searching for 'polite' robber

Norwood police are looking for a machete-wielding, yet polite, robber with "brown, puppy-dog eyes."

The man robbed a Sunoco convenience store about 8:45 p.m. July 26.

Police posted surveillance video and pictures of the suspect online this week.

"Give me all the money in the register," the robber said, according to the surveillance tape.

Then he makes other demands.

"Five packs of Newports (cigarettes)," he tells the clerk. "Give me a ton of scratch tickets, too. I want all the $20 ones."

Before he leaves, he makes sure to mind his manners.

"All right. Have a good night. Thank you," he said.

Despite brandishing a large machete, police said he did not get away with any scratch tickets.

They described him as a white man, about 25 years old and 5-foot-11. He has dark hair and brown eyes.

Police said they believe a getaway driver was waiting in an older, dark-colored Toyota Corolla with no hub caps. METRO/MN

Hub comedians, Yankee-haters go after pinstripes

- Author duo explains how to 'annoy a Yankee fan'
- New book is available as Bombers come to Boston

The most storied rivalry in sports typically heats up as the baseball schedule winds down and the August temperatures soar.

But a new book is helping fuel the fire that is the Red Sox–Yankees rivalry.

"Things that Might Annoy a Yankee Fan" was written by Boston comedians — and obviously lifelong Red Sox fans — Dave Barend and Paul Nardizzi.

Although Barend grew up in upstate New York, he eventually found his way and moved to the Bay State.

"When you grow up surrounded by Yankees fans, you either become a Yankees fan or, if you have half a brain, you end up hating Yankees fans," he said. "I have half a brain, so I became a Yankee-hater."

The duo said the suggestions in the book come from their experiences with Yankees fans (like Barend's brother-in-law).

The annoyances range from the silly to the sadistic, and Nardizzi said the book contains a warning that some of the suggestions — like lighting a Yankees play-by-play broadcaster on fire and then urinating on him — are not meant to actually take place.

"Some of them can't literally be done," Nardizzi said.

With the Yankees coming to Fenway for a weekend series, the pair plans to be at the Baseball Tavern signing copies before the games. They also will appear on NESN before the start of Friday's game.

2. When they proudly rattle off the 27 years they won it all, quickly rattle off the 74 years they didn't.

The driver of a van that crashed while transporting special-needs passengers was at the time high on Oxycodone and in possession of crack cocaine and other drug-abuse tools, according to authorities.

Addis Woldguiorguis, 51, of Dorchester, pleaded not guilty yesterday and was ordered held on $5,000 bail and told not to drive, according to the Middlesex district attorney's office.

After the crash, police said they found an empty Oxycodone prescription bottle as well as crack and drug paraphernalia.

He spoke out at his arraignment yesterday and said he was blinded by the sun just before the crash, the Globe reported. He also told police he took the pills for various illnesses, including prostate cancer.

Woldguiorguis was driving 12 passengers to a rehab center when he crashed into a garbage truck in Newton on Monday. Everyone inside was injured; three were seriously harmed.

FCC report: Web speed improving

Broadband speeds on average are within 80 percent of what major Internet service providers advertise — a big improvement from two years ago, according to a government study.

The Federal Communications Commission studied cable, DSL and fiber-to-the-home services at 13 top U.S. broadband providers.

The agency found Verizon Communications's fiber network was best at meeting or exceeding advertised maximum download speeds, while Cablevision Systems was the worst.

Overall, the numbers were a big boost from 2009, when data-indicated download speeds were often about half of Internet service providers' maximum advertised speeds.

"This represents a significant improvement over the findings from two years ago."
GENACHOWSKI

"Most major ISPs are providing service close to what they're advertising," FCC Chairman Julius Genachowski said.

During peak consumer usage hours when networks are busiest, actual download speeds varied from 114 percent to 54 percent of advertised speed. REUTERS

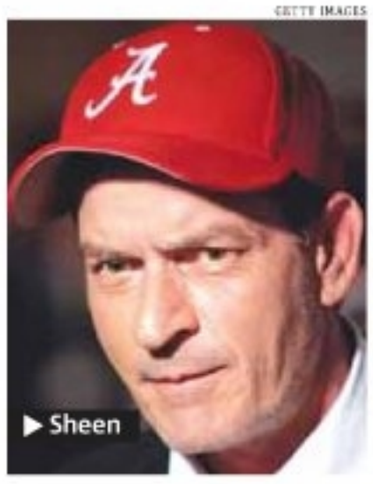
Will Sheen character be killed?

LOS ANGELES. Charlie Sheen's "Two and A Half Men" character will not only be killed off, he will be given a funeral when the TV series returns in September, according to entertainment industry website Deadline Hollywood.

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Sheen

The screen demise of Sheen — whose role on the TV comedy made him the highest-paid actor in Hollywood — follows his firing from the show after a vicious public spat earlier this year with "Two and A Half Men" co-creator and producer Chuck Lorre.

Now Lorre appears set to wreak revenge when the comedy returns with new star Ashton Kutcher in what Deadline Hollywood said is a secrecy-shrouded two-part season premiere that will be filmed later this week. REUTERS

Public blowout

Sheen was fired from the show in March after insulting Lorre in a bizarre series of interviews that followed months of drug- and drink-fueled partying and repeated spells in rehab.

- Kutcher — creator of the TV series "Punk'd" and husband to actress Demi Moore — was hired as a new character on the hit series.
- Sheen has signed a deal for a new TV series called "Anger Management."

Feeling sad? Fatty foods can fix that

A sweet tooth might not be the only reason why we reach for ice cream and cake in times of stress.

Comfort from the consumption of fatty foods is not derived purely from the pleasurable sensory experience of eating, but also through gut-brain signaling, according to a study by scientists at the University of Leuven in Belgium.

The study used MRI scans to investigate the effects of fatty acids on emotion when directly injected into the stomach.

Scientists played mournful music and showed sad images to a group of 12 participants before giving half the group fatty acids through a feeding tube and a saline solution to the rest.

"Eating fat seems to make us less vulnerable to sad emotions."
LUKAS VAN OUDENHOVE, LEAD RESEARCHER

Without knowing which substance they received, the volunteers rated their mood on a scale of one to nine before and during scanning.

The results showed that those who were injected with fatty acids were only half as sad after watching the images and listening to the music as the participants who were given the saline solution. REUTERS

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

▶ What's this all about? Ryan Reynolds and Sandra Bullock got all googly-eyed a the premiere of "The Change-Up" on Monday. Are they in like or are they better actors than we give them credit for?

A photo op for the ages

Does she know how to make an appearance or what? Sandra Bullock, a hot 47, surprised photographers and stars alike on the red carpet for the premiere of "The Change-Up" on Monday night. She showed up midway through the press interviews to snuggle up to Ryan Reynolds, 34, her co-star in 2009's "The Proposal." Reynolds, who was giving interviews alongside co-star Jason Bateman, broke free from reporters to greet her, per People magazine. The two exchanged a peck on the cheek and a hug.

Of course, having two stars who have recently been through divorces (while dodging rumors of their own shacking up) popping up together in front of a bazillion reporters is all a ploy to generate interest in the fact that "The Change-Up" is opening this Friday. But still! This makes me hope that they'll get married and raise Bullock's baby and just be adequate but uninteresting actors together until end times. And is it just me, or is anyone else intrigued about "The Change-Up" now?

Damn you, marketing geniuses!

J. Lo still believes in love

Jennifer Lopez is opening up about her divorce from husband Marc Anthony and what led to their breakup. "This was the hardest decision I've ever had to face. I really wanted this family to work," she tells Vanity Fair, adding that getting her career back on track played a major role in the breakdown of their relationship. "We had the first three years of our marriage just for us. I wasn't working, it was mainly about him. Then we got pregnant. Then it became about the kids. And then I started working again," she says. Still, Lopez hasn't given up on finding love again. "Sometimes it doesn't work, and that's sad. But I remain an eternal optimist about love. I believe in love."

The institution of marriage? Well, that's a whole different ball game.

Ryan Phillippe, baby daddy?

Whether or not Ryan Phillippe is the biological father of ex-girlfriend Alexis Knapp's newborn daughter is still up in the air, but the baby's last name seems to suggest he is. On the baby's birth certificate, her last name is listed as "Phillippe Knapp," according to People magazine, though the section listing the girl's father was left blank. Phillippe has previously indicated he's ready to take responsibility for the girl should tests prove he is the father.

Shakespeare for the Common people

Theater company puts on the infrequently performed 'All's Well That Ends Well' ◗ Actor Fred Sullivan, Jr. on bouncing his voice off buildings

There's no shame in looking up "All's Well That Ends Well" on Wikipedia. If you didn't read it in high school, you may have never heard of it.

"It's just never done," says Fred Sullivan, Jr., an actor in the Shakespeare on the Common production that exposes the little-known play free of charge to anyone willing to stake out a spot in the grass.

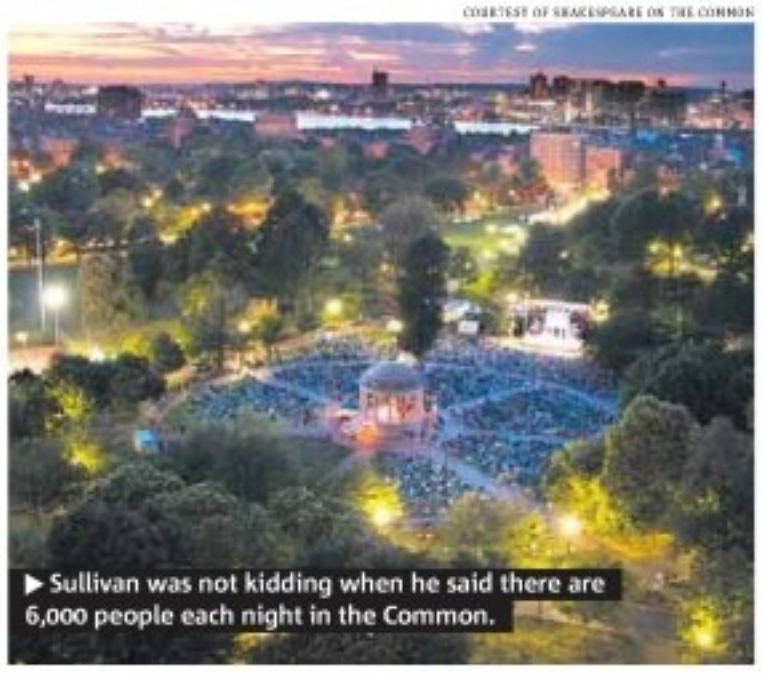
Scholars often call it a "problem play," because the story doesn't fall neatly into a comedy or tragedy category.

"There's a lot of joy, but there's also death and dishonor and unrequited love on just about every page. And the characters are just as unlikeable as they are likable," says Sullivan, who has now performed on the Common five years in a row. In this show he plays "swaggering coward" Parolles, best friend to escapee fiance Bertram.

Performing for huge crowds on an outdoor stage is a different experience from acting in a traditional theater. Crystal-clear enunciation and extra-animated body language are musts, explains Sullivan.

"I find it extremely romantic," he says. "It's 6,000 people a night, on blankets, eating salads, listening to the greatest sound system in the world pump Shakespeare into Boston Common. If you get loud enough, your voice bounces off the buildings."

COURTESY OF SHAKESPEARE ON THE COMMON



▶ Sullivan was not kidding when he said there are 6,000 people each night in the Common.

Background

Queen to groundlings

Shakespeare on the Common performances are a throwback to the playwright's outdoor shows at London's Globe Theatre 400 years ago.

"There were all walks of life watching, from the queen to the groundlings," muses Sullivan.

Is going raw right for you?

- The raw food diet brings eating back to basics
- Benefits and drawbacks of uncooked meals

The summer heat may be inspiring you to give your stove a break — but could you give up cooked foods for good? Proponents of the raw food diet say you can and should.

The raw food diet comprises unheated foods and foods heated to no more than 115 degrees. Advocates of the diet claim that it wards away cancer, diabetes and other health problems, because powerful enzymes that aid in health are not destroyed through cooking.

"There's no question in my mind that this is the way man was meant to eat," says Brian Clement, Ph.D., the co-director of Hippocrates Health Institute, which incorporates a raw food diet to support the healing of its patients. "It's not magic, it's chemistry we're talking about."

But not everyone is touting the diet's benefits.

"Scientifically, there isn't a lot of evidence that supports the benefits of a raw food diet above and beyond what a healthy vegan or vegetation diet would offer," says Monika Saigal, a registered dietitian. "There are some nutrients that are actually more available when foods are cooked."

STOCKBYTE

▶ Yes, you can eat more than celery on the raw food diet!

"There's no question in my mind that this is the way man was meant to eat."
BRIAN CLEMENT, PH.D.

Saigal also says that going on the diet takes work.

"I think for the majority of the population, it's very difficult to meet your nutritional needs on a raw foods diet. It takes a lot of time and preparation to make sure you're getting the nutrients you need," she says.

If you think the diet is right for you, Clement first recommends reducing your intake of meat and dairy, and then going totally raw on a gradual basis.

"You don't have to take this lock, stock and barrel," he asserts. "Take your time, and it's so easy to do."

New breads on board at Subway

We've always enjoyed stopping at Subway for a quick, on-the-go lunch — and now we have even more reasons to love the popular sandwich chain: All of its 6-inch and foot-long breads are now fortified with calcium and vitamin D, giving a 6-inch sandwich the nutritional equivalency of a glass of milk. The move comes on the heels of the chain's decision to lower the sodium of its Fresh Fit sandwiches by 28 percent and its national menu by 16 percent. We'll eat to that! MEREDITH ENGEL

Atheism is not a religion

RE: "ATHEISTS LACK CONSISTENCY": Not all atheists object to the cross at the Ground Zero museum. More importantly, though, the allegation that atheists are completely silent while "mandatory Koran reading" is going on in schools is misleading. I was able to find just one story after some quick Googling, in which the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill assigned a book describing the earliest 35 suras. From what I can tell, this is not teaching the Koran as revealed truth, it's an attempt to help students understand Islam. TURNER HAYES, CAMBRIDGE

The WTC Cross belongs at the 9/11 museum, as part of an inclusive, historical display. However, museum organizers are treating the cross like a Christian icon rather than a cultural artifact. ZACHARY W. BOS, BOSTON

This cross-raising on public property may or may not rise to a church-state separation violation, but there is a stench in the air over a religious symbol erected and feted as such on public property. MICHAEL MEYERS, VIA E-MAIL

Discrimination runs both ways

RE: "JUAN WILLIAMS' BATTLE FOR AN 'HONEST DEBATE'": I don't understand how Juan Williams can claim that no one should be discriminated against while also stating his fear when seeing women and men in traditional Muslim garb in airports. MIRANDA COHEN, VIA E-MAIL

Washington not a jobs creator

RE: "WHICH SIDE CAN YOU TRUST?": Unfortunately we cannot trust either party to create jobs. Jobs are not created by the government. Increased government spending takes money from the private sector. The money does not find its way back to the people, it stays in Washington. KELLY DONNOE, VIA E-MAIL

Government has sold us out

RE: "DEBT-LIMIT DEAL DONE": The $900 billion raise in the debt ceiling will not even last one year. Every dollar we go further into debt means that the Federal Reserve and Goldman Sachs make more money. Most U.S. administrations are full of ex-Fed and Goldman Sachs employees. Your elected officials have put in question the sacrifices of those who died to protect this nation. JOSEPH DUPONT, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Although at times you might build upon the thoughts of others, no one will accuse you of trying to take credit for their ideas. What you come up with will be extremely novel and unique.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. The respectful manner in which you treat the property of others will not go unnoticed. You'll not only handle things with great care, but also return them polished and restored.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. You won't hesitate to make compromises or concessions in order to placate a friend of long standing. Once you start to yield, so will your pal.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Even luck has its limitations, so don't press yours beyond a reasonable amount. Hopes can be realized through patient proceedings, not through magical maneuvers.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. It might be wise to try to keep relatives and in-laws out of your personal affairs if you can. Even though they might only be trying to help, they could still gum up the works for you.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. In trying to give aid, a friend might try to cover for you by telling another not what you really said, but what she thinks you should have said.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. To your credit, instead of worrying about what you might have lost, you'll balance out any losses on apples by finding a way to pick up some gains on peaches.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. One of the things you do best is be remarkably productive when on a roll. You can expect to accomplish quite a bit.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. You can't help but be attracted to anything or anyone who is exciting and different. Should you run across such a person, take care you don't neglect your old pals for the new discovery.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Your instincts are rather remarkable, which could be a blessing for you if you are involved in some kind of negotiations that require an understanding of dollars and cents. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

‘Pride,’ ‘professionalism’ earn Faulk another year

‘An inspiration to all of us,’ Belichick says ● Status was unclear after 2010 injury ● 13th season for Faulk

Kevin Faulk wasn’t sure what his future held with the Patriots after he tore his ACL during Week 2 of the 2010 season.

The Pats’ all-purpose yardage leader was on IR, and his contract was up at the end of the season.

But Faulk got a call from coach Bill Belichick shortly before the start of the lockout saying the team wanted the 13-year vet back.

Faulk’s resume speaks for itself, but he’s getting up there in age. It was his leadership and attitude that earned him another opportunity.

“He’s been a team player,” Belichick said yesterday. “He takes great pride and professionalism in his job. He’s a great example for all of us in terms of being a professional and being team-oriented and putting himself secondary to team goals and setting a great example.”

Belichick was quick to put Faulk up in the ranks of prototypical Patriots from the last decade, too.

“He’s along the lines of Troy Brown, Tedy Bruschi, Rodney Harrison and many other players we’ve had like that,” Belichick said. “He’s really at the top of that list.”

The Pats drafted two running backs this year: Shane Vereen and Steven Ridley. With a short offseason, they’ll need all the help they can get — from coaches and, if they’re smart, Faulk.

“I think any player on the team or any coaches on the team for that matter that watches Kevin Faulk can see positives in Kevin and learn from it,” Belichick said. “He’s an inspiration to all of us the way he carries himself, the way he goes about his job and his positive contributions to the team.”

WEIGHING IN ON THE DEFICIT DEBACLE

By Attorney George Warshaw

The damage has been done.

What we've seen in recent weeks is not a dispute among men and women of principle engaging in honest debate.

What we've seen are politicians more concerned with embarrassing and humiliating the other political party, more concerned with leveraging the next election, and more willing to engage in nasty, inflammatory name-calling, than they are concerned about us, "we the people."

They are all at fault, and they are all disgraceful. It's not just my view alone. I think it the world's view as well.

Reuter's, on July 29th, reported on the perception of, China, our largest creditor. Its public voice, the People's Daily newspaper, called our government's handling of our debt crisis "irresponsible" and "immoral." It accused U.S. politicians of "sacrificing other people's interests in exchange for a few votes."

It concluded: "The farce taking place on the U.S. political stage has let the whole world know where the United States' political problems are."

Despite the obvious bias and antagonism China may have for our democratic system, the problem is that they could still be right.

Can our government make an important decision, or will it be more of the same in the future?

That's one angry citizen's view.

New digs

While filming, the 12 "HGTV Design Star" contestants stayed in the $7.25 million triplex penthouse at One Brooklyn Bridge Park in Brooklyn, New York City. The 4,638-square-foot, waterfront property boasts a private elevator to each floor, a rooftop deck and 360-degree views of Brooklyn and Lower Manhattan — plus the building's yoga room, media lounge and virtual driving range.

"One Brooklyn Bridge Park was the perfect place for a show about interior design," says Robert Levine, CEO of RAL Companies, the building's developer. "The homes in One Brooklyn, and the penthouse in particular, epitomize great design and were an inspiration for the finalists."

Chicago

Kevin Grace, 42

"As a designer, one of the most influential opportunities one can have is to live in a metropolitan city like Chicago. There are many different places I like to go to be inspired. If I were to sum up 'How does Chicago influence my design style?' I would have to say it's by far the architecture. 'Old mixed with new' is the basis for my design approach in almost everything I create."

Atlanta

Doug Hines, 44

"Decorating in my city, Atlanta, is especially fun when you take advantage of the warm climate. I purchased my brick and stucco ranch (built in 1950) four years ago. The lines and architecture are very modern for a 1950s design. I even have pink flamingos on my lawn for a retro, whimsical touch! I had the house painted all white to convey a tropical, mid-century vibe."

Dallas

Leslie Ezelle, 43

"The home is a 1950s ranch-style home, extremely common in Dallas. The kitchen was redone to go back to the L-shaped format [for which] these ranch-style homes are known. This kitchen is reconfigured from a bar that protruded into the space to an open floor plan to increase the working space. New quartz countertops with metallic-gray cabinets give the kitchen a contemporary look."

Brooklyn

Cathy Hobbs, 42

"Often in New York, apartments come as a blank canvas — a white box with white walls. I believe in infusing bold, brilliant color as much as possible. So in my own master bedroom, I painted all of the walls pumpkin orange, my signature color, and then paired it with crisp, bright white and chocolate brown. My advice is to select only your favorite things and seek inspiration there."
